

Private Sewer Systems

Unsure which one you have?

Cesspit/Cesspool:
Underground tank that collects & holds sewage water until emptied.
For more detail visit: www.asllimited.co.uk/cesspits-also-known-cesspools

Septic Tank:
Underground tanks that collect & separate solids from sewage water, before discharging to ground.
For more detail visit: www.asllimited.co.uk/septic-tanks

Treatment Plant:
Underground tank that collect & treats sewage water to a high standard, before discharging to ground, rivers or watercourses.

Let's start here...

Somewhere?! ... I think

Does your system discharge or just hold wastewater?

discharges

holds water

You may have a cesspit that needs emptying periodically

Cool! Make sure it's not leaking and look after it.

Does your system separate solids from the water prior to discharging? (via multiple tanks / dip pipes / separation wall, etc.)

Eew! - does it WHAT now?!

Do you have a cesspit that has had a discharge added?

Unfortunately your system may need to be upgraded to meet the general binding rules.

Does it have electrical/mechanical parts?

No

Yes

It sounds like you've probably got a septic tank

It sounds like you've probably got a treatment plant

Did you know? clinker bed systems are no longer compliant with the updated 'general binding rules'.

Looking to upgrade your cesspit private sewage system or move over to a main sewer connection?

Uh oh - do you think that's what that smell is?!

I have absolutely no idea!!

Hmm, if you are unsure then you may be financially vulnerable if it starts polluting.

As the owner of a private sewage system you are the legal operator and are responsible for it's compliance.

Maybe it's best to check it meets the binding rules.

Does it comply with the 'general binding rules' updated in 2020?

No

Yes

Well that's fantastic! If you regularly maintain it to meet the binding rules then you get FIVE GOLD STARS for looking after your private sewage system AND the environment!

No Idea
